Yes, GSA contracts are provided for as an exception to the bidding statute pursuant to I.C. § 67-2803. I would make sure the county has verification of the GSA contract, so there is no question the purchase is an exception that can be documented.

Scott,

I have one more question, can we purchase this machine on the GSA contract and not go out to RFP?

Laurie: Please see the string of emails below. I am ok from a civil standpoint and Danny Clark is ok from a criminal standpoint. Move forward.

Scott,

I appreciate you bringing this to my attention. A search triggering the 4th amendment has limited exceptions. One of those is the ability of law enforcement to search prior to placing into a facility (jail) for obvious reasons. So from a criminal perspective this should be fine. I do like that they will limit its use for when the inmate otherwise meets criteria (conversely I've never liked strip searches as a matter of standard course). When someone is already "in" the facility, then having a SOP to operate from would be good both criminally and civilly.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Danny: Please review the email below from Lt. Kendrick. I don't see a problem from a civil prospective but wonder if the same is ok from a criminal prospective regarding searches. I doubt it but wanted your office to have a quick look before I get back to her.

Scott,

We have the funds and the opportunity to purchase this machine through a GSA contract that will be opening very soon. We would like to put this technology into our facility to better help us screen inmates that are concealing drugs on and in their bodies. We are experiencing an increasing problem with the inmates smuggling drugs into the facility. Last week we found an inmate that had mushrooms inside the one of the dorms. We are having him charged with that offense. In that attached file is some information on the machine and how it works. Basically it is an x-ray. A person is fully clothed when they are passed through the machine. We would use this search process in conjunction with our policy on strip searches. The inmate would have to meet the criteria to be strip searched before being searched by the machine. Do you see any problems with purchasing this technology?

Laurie
